

"MOTHER'S GONE"

Little did friends and loved ones of Mrs. James Younger dream that she would be separated by death from her home of early in life and within a week's time.

Saturday night, October 2, the birth of the second daughter, Rebecca Brashear, occurred and, seemingly, the mother and child were in perfect condition, but two hours later Mrs. Younger was taken with a convulsion. Mr. Younger hastily called Dr. Simons, who had, but a short time before, left the bedside. Another convulsion seized her and she rapidly grew worse. Dr. Owen, of this city, and Dr. Cecil, of Louisville, were summoned. They with Dr. Simons and Mrs. Dunn, worked with all their might to relieve her. Urethric poison set up and hopes for her recovery then wavered. Friday morning at 11 o'clock she died.

The funeral was held from the home Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The arrangements were kindly conducted by Mr. Hamman and loving friends of Mrs. Younger. The Rev. Mr. Hoskinson, who performed the marriage ceremony that united her to Mr. Younger, was the minister of the services, and the music was rendered by the choir of the Epworth League, of which she was a diligent member. The interment took place in the Cloverport cemetery. Most beautiful flowers were sent in remembrance, and the following young women were flower girls: Misses Manie DeHaven, Ray Heyser, Lula Severs and Eva Plank. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. J. Byrne Severs, John D. Bahage, Lyle Behen, Fred Ferry, M. Perkins and Harry Newsum.

Sorely shocked from her death were Mrs. Younger's friends of her old home near Union Star and Stephensport, and many attended the funeral. Among those who came from a distance were: Mrs. R. B. McGlothlin, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. McGlothlin, Mrs. Bettie Na, Mrs. M. L. Roberts, Mrs. Milner, Miss Milner, Mr. Sam Dix, Mr. Perkins, Miss Myrtle Hoyle, Claude Younger, Sarah Haynes, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Herrman, Mr. and Mrs. Julie Brashear, Mrs. Sallie Moorman, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Sipple, Miss Eva McGlothlin, Mrs. Morris Beard, Mrs. Percy Beard, Mrs. John Kincheloe, George Younger, Miss Sallie Younger and Miss Kate Jackson. Through a confusion of telegrams Mrs. Younger's brother, Mr. Owen Brashear, of Shreveport, La., did not receive the sad news until Sunday morning which was too late to get here for the funeral.

Mrs. Younger, before her marriage to Mr. James S. Younger, of this city, was Miss Sue Avitt Brashear. The wedding took place June 1, 1904. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brashear, died when she was thirteen, and she fell into the good hands of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. McGlothlin. Mrs. Younger was thirty-one years of age. Besides the infant child, she leaves another little girl, Eudora McGlothlin, who will live with her father and grandmother. Mr. and Mrs. McGlothlin have taken the baby to rear. For a week the precious little babe was tenderly fostered by Mrs. Joe Sawyer, who was always so sweet to the mother as a neighbor and friend.

Mrs. Younger's life can be summed up in the word, Christian. She was not only a member of the Christian church, but she lived its teachings. Like every one, she had friends who were blinded to the true light of her soul; they treated her harshly, but when the end came, it was harder for them than for her, because she was forgiving notwithstanding her heart was crushed. However, greater was the number of those who loved her dearly, comforted her in her disappointments and rejoiced with her in her pleasures. To them her life was a wonderful blessing and cherished in gratefulness it will be as the days go by. Just a little while, in the still hour of the morning, before death came, Mrs. Younger was asked if she was ready to die, and she answered, "If it is the Lord's will." She called for her children and husband. The sight was heart-rending to friends at the bedside, for they realized what dear little Eudora says, "Mother's gone."

BEST TOWN IN KENTUCKY.

Is Cloverport With Her New Natural Gas Service—Another Well Being Drilled For More Fuel.

GREAT SUPPLY CONFIDENT.

The Kentucky, Indiana Gas Co. has had its derricks moved to Ed. Whitehead's lot in the West End of town and is erecting same for the purpose of drilling a new gas well at once. The company is doing everything to secure an abundant supply of gas for Cloverport this winter and is confident that they will have all of this great fuel that our citizens can use in another thirty days. They are also getting into shape to do pipe-fitting and all work necessary to give our citizens up-to-date service. Mr. C. E. Tague having arrived last week from the gas fields of Ohio to assist in this work. With our streets lighted in the most approved and with plenty of gas for the use of our citizens, Cloverport is again assuming her position as one of the best towns in Kentucky.

Gas Company Has New Office Quarters

The Kentucky-Indiana Gas Company has moved its office to the Breckenridge News building. It is lighted and heated by gas and is most convenient for their customers.

Preaching At Garfield.

THOS. J. MOORE ANSWERS ALLEN R. KINCHELOE PUBLICLY

Kincheloe's Letter Misleading to the People—Moore and Others Want to Know Why Roy Cain, Gabe Taul and Judge Ahl were Turned Down.

REPUBLICANS "GOT MONEY AND WILL SPEND IT"

Hardsburg, Ky., Oct. 7, 1909. Hon. Allen R. Kincheloe, Chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee of Breckenridge County.

Dear Sir: On September 28, I received at the hands of Mr. Jesse Ekridge, a letter signed by you as follows, to-wit:

"Allen R. Kincheloe, Chm. Rep. Cam. Com., and for the Republican Candidates" and which is as follows:

Hardsburg, Ky. Sept. 25, 1909. Hon. T. J. Moore, Chairman Democratic Campaign Committee and the Democratic Candidates.

Dear Sir: At a meeting of the Republican Campaign Committee, held with the Republican candidates for office, it was unanimously determined to submit an agreement to the Democratic Campaign Committee, that the campaign should be conducted without the use of money or whiskey, or any other illegal or improper means or device.

Acting upon this sentiment for an absolutely fair, clean and legal election, I was authorized by the candidates and the committee, to submit the following proposition to you, to the committee and to each of the Democratic candidates:

First. That money or whiskey shall be used in the canvass, directly or indirectly, by the candidates, or by the campaign committees, or by the county committees for any improper or illegal purpose to influence voters in any manner.

Second. That no "Bat-wings" or any other illegal device shall be used in this election.

Third. That the respective campaign committees, county committees and all the candidates on both sides, shall keep an accurate and complete account of all money expended, the purpose thereof, the amounts and names of each person contributing any money to either of the candidates or committees, or to any or either of them, and the names shall be published in the News and Leader.

Fourth. That each candidate on both tickets, including deputies, and each member of the respective campaign committees, and each member of the county committees shall take a written oath before some duly authorized officer that he will not use or employ any of the methods, means or devices set out in this writing. The said oaths to be preserved in some bank.

Fifth. That a sum of five hundred dollars ($500) be raised, one half to be given by the Republican candidates and one half to be given by the Democratic candidates to be placed in the Bank of Hardsburg, or the Farmers Bank, for the purpose of offering a reward for the arrest and conviction of any persons whosoever they may who shall violate any of the election laws in this campaign and election.

I state emphatically that all the Republican candidates and each member of the Republican campaign committee, and members of the Republican county committee stand ready and willing to enter into this agreement and abide by all its provisions. It is desired by us that you and each of you give this proposition serious consideration both as Democrats and citizens. Certainly we realize that the wishes of the Democratic candidates will determine whether this proposition is accepted or rejected, but we trust they will take the same view of this moral question that our candidates do. We are not wedded to these exact propositions, but any agreement that embodies these ideas will be satisfactory to us. An answer is desired as soon as possible, and we hope it will be forthcoming by the 7th day of October, next. This will give plenty of time for the committees and candidates to be interviewed and consulted.

Very respectfully,
ALLEN R. KINCHELOE,
Chairman Campaign Committee and for the Republican Candidates.

In response to this I will say that as Chairman of the Campaign Committee for the Democratic ticket, I expected to answer this letter on October 7, as was requested in your letter. But without receiving an answer, or waiting until the time which you suggested would be allowed me in which to answer the same, you have permitted to be published this same letter. I had not had a committee meeting in the meantime, and do not answer except in the capacity of chairman of the committee, but as chairman I will say that we regard this letter as absolutely misleading to the people who read it and who are not familiar with the untruths of the two contending parties.

First, you speak of the use of money and whiskey in the campaign. You object to the use of such to influence voters in the present campaign. If so, and if you and your committee and your candidates are sincere in this proposal, will you answer a few questions just to show the people of the county that you really are in favor of fair elections?

Allow me to ask you if this is true, why was Roy Cain, a young man of good family, a staunch Republican, and eminently fitted to perform the duties of the office to which he aspired, and an announced candidate for the office of County Court Clerk, but who had no money, laid on the shelf for the office for a man who was not a candidate, who did not seek the nomination, openly at least, but who had money?

Why was Gabe Taul, a young man coming of age of the strongest, truest and best Republican families in the county, eminently qualified to hold the office which he sought at the hands of the party, a man whose integrity, character and ability is above question; an announced candidate for the office of Sheriff, but a man who makes no pretension of having a vast amount of money to put in the campaign funds, thrown over for a man who was not a candidate, who did not seek the nomination, was nominated not because he wanted the office but because he had money and resources?

Why was Judge Ahl, a man with a good official record of eight years as County Judge, a high type of gentleman and an old Union soldier, an announced candidate for the office of County Judge, but who unfortunately did not have a large amount of money to put up but who, in his candidacy for the nomination, advocated that this race should be made without the use of money or any undue influences. Why was he left out in the cold and the Republicans nominate a man who was not a candidate for the nomination, but who is a man of means?

Why were men whose disqualification consisted in their inability to put up the money to buy votes? Why! Oh! why! and echo answers why? Then when you have answered these questions to the satisfaction of the people of the county, go to the different express offices and find from the agents what particular candidate is having the most whiskey shipped to the county?

Why do you ask that the Campaign Committees keep an accurate and complete account of the money used and the purpose for which such funds are used. Now, so far as we are concerned, I shall endeavor to keep last such an account and render the same to the candidates.

Now, as to placing in some bank $500 for the purpose of securing the arrest and conviction of any person violating the election laws, we do not deem it at all necessary, for the law of Kentucky provides for just such offenses and prescribes the penalty for the same, and it is certainly severe enough to deter even the boldest from committing a crime against the election laws.

The Democratic party has ever stood for law and order, and when it fails to represent these principles, it will not have for its nominees such men as the ones who are now the Democratic candidates for the county offices of Breckenridge county, and when you have answered to the satisfaction of the good people of Breckenridge county the questions above asked, then you can well ask us to treat with you on this proposition.

It has been a public boast of the Republicans that their nominees "have their money and will spend it," and we are convinced that it is true, for we see too much evidence of the fact to doubt it. The principle of the Democratic ticket recommends itself to the people of the county.

The nominees are without exception men of high and well known moral character, and the reputation of each one recommending any man associated with him on the ticket.

I am respectfully,
Thos. J. Moore,
Chairman of the Democratic Campaign Committee of Breckenridge county.

Dr. Evelyn Bush Doing Much For Sufferers.

The Louisville Herald, Sunday, October 3, contained a most interesting article about "The Sanatorium." It is a new institution of Osteopathy founded by Dr. Evelyn Bush, and is situated on Fourth Ave., between York and Breckenridge in Louisville. What osteopathy has done for the little son of Dr. Bush is marvelous and for that reason she has opened a sanatorium for the relief of sufferers all over the world.

The Weakest Governor Kentucky Ever Had.

Governor Wilson has again confirmed the general opinion that he is the weakest Governor the State of Kentucky has ever had, when he sent out that letter inviting upon lawlessness and clanish rights. He offers a pardon to the men who kill their fellow-men in defense of their lives and property. There has always been a law in this State—we suppose the Governor knows about it—that gives a man his freedom under a murder charge when he can prove self-defense. Why does Gov. Wilson want to heap kindling on the fire by coming out and reiterating a statement he has formerly made and one that has been covered by the statutes for years? For no other reason, we think, than he showed when he made his Detroit speech telling out-of-state people how lawless Kentuckians were. His reason in both cases was that of a weak but crafty man.—Madisonville Journal.

MISS HENSLEY DIES IN FOREIGN FIELD.

Hardsburg Shocked Over Cablegram Received Monday Telling of the Death of the Lovely Young Girl.

NO PARTICULARS RECEIVED.

Monday morning Mrs. Lucretia Hensley received a cablegram from China telling of the death of her daughter, Miss Eula Hensley.

Just before her departure abroad, Miss Hensley made a brief visit here and delivered a short address at the Baptist church. What she said was deeply impressed upon the minds and hearts of those who heard her, and it is with keen regret that Cloverport received the sad news.

VERY BEAUTIFUL WEDDING

Takes Place At St. Anthony's When Miss Mary Jo Mattingly And Mr. Thos. A. Mattingly Were Married.

PROMINENT YOUNG PEOPLE.

One of the most beautiful weddings of the season was solemnized at St. Anthony's church, Long Lick, Wednesday, October the sixth, the contracting parties being Miss Mary Jo Mattingly, of Axtel, and Thomas Augustus Mattingly, of Kirk.

The church was artistically decorated with evergreens and roses. At 9:30 the bridal party entered to the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, rendered by Miss Irene Mattingly, Little Miss Leo Berry and Master Jack, the bride's niece and nephew, acting as flower girl and ribbon boy. Both children were dressed in white. Little Miss Leo carried a beautiful bouquet of white carnations and ferns held with white ribbon. They proceeded up the center aisle to the bridal party, where Master Jack untied the ribbons and stepping aside they allowed the bridal party to pass to the altar. The attendants were Miss M. H. Cornwell, of Irvington, and Bernard Rhodes, of Kirk. The bride and bridesmaid wore elegant white princess dresses with hats and gloves to match and carried white prayer books and amethyst rosaries.

After the ceremony and celebration of Law Nuptial Mass by Rev. Father Genet. The bridal party returned to the home of the bride, where an elaborate 12 o'clock luncheon was served. The groom is the youngest son of J. L. Mattingly and a prosperous farmer, while the bride is the eldest daughter of H. C. Mattingly and has figured prominently in school work.

THE other day a small boy picked up a wreath of roses that had been dropped in the street during a funeral procession. He gave it to an old woman and said, "Me believes in decorating folks before they die." Is not that a great belief to live? It is glorious to decorate. Try it. There are many flowers, not all roses, but kind words and loving thoughts for decorating your friends as they pass your garden gate.--A. Louise Babbage.

ANOTHER GRAND-STAND PLAY.

The Republicans have made another grand-stand play in this race by advocating a system of reform in the conduct of the coming election. In a lengthy article, signed by their chairman, they suggest to the Democrats that no money or whisky be used in this election, or anything else that will tend to corrupt the voter. In answer to this the News will say that purity in elections has always been advocated by the Democratic party from the days of Jefferson down to this good hour.

Not until the Republican party came into being, and began to tamper with the ballot, and manipulate votes, was any thing else known. Not until their powerful hand took hold of the machine in this country was there any thing known but a free ballot, and a fair count. Though with a lavish hand for power and greed they inaugurated the very thing of which they now complain. More's the pity, but 'tis true. Money, and a system of intimidation in elections, both State and national, has been their principal stock in trade. And to carry the system further, they have gone so far many times, as to manipulate local elections, where seemingly the result would operate to their advantage. Now they come and want to pose before the people as a party of purity and great moral reform. There is nothing to it. As the boys say, it is "too thin."

Why should the people of Breckenridge county have to be reminded about the moral standing of the men on the Democratic ticket this year? The fact is no such thing is necessary. The further fact is that they are men whose moral character and standing are above reproach, and they do not have to be told that it is unlawful to use money and whisky to carry the election. Neither did the Democrats, as a party in this county, select their ticket without first consulting the will of the majority. The same thing can not be said of the Republicans. The fact is, the present Republican ticket as made up and hatched out, was done by the ring leaders at Hardinsburg and Cloverport. Wm. Ahl, one of the strongest men they had for County Judge, was set aside, and a man who was not a candidate but a few days, given the nomination. This was done because Mr. Ahl had no money to put into the canvass. Mr. Beard, the nominee for County Court Clerk, was not a candidate, but he was put on the ticket because he had money, and for the further reason perhaps that he married into an influential Democratic family. Roy Cain, who was a candidate for this office for months, and who needed it, and who was worthy in every sense of the word, was set aside and his claims to the nomination ignored. So all down the line the steam roller, guided by the skillful hand of the Republican leaders, did its work. Yet these apostles of moral reform now come and call for a clean election. Oh! ye gods of war, defend us. No, the Democratic party will take care of its own canvass, and look after the interests of the great common people.

John P. Haswell, Jr., is the only man who has ever edited a paper at Hardinsburg that has not tried to tear down the News with the first stroke of his pen. John Haswell remembers what the News has done for him, and he is showing his appreciation of our past efforts to help him on the road to political success. In our estimation there are few men fairer than Haswell. We have come in close contact with all, the Democrats and the Republicans. We have not forgotten their good and bad traits in newspaper association. And truly, it seems, that all of them, sooner or later, have to come home to the News for genuine help and loyal support.

When Mathias Miller drove into Hudsonville several years ago he said, "Boys, I want your votes, but I have no whisky and will not let a man put up a drop for me to get them." The fellows went around all morning with their mouths opened and as lost as ducks out of water. Late in the afternoon a man drove in town with a wagon load of water melons. Judge Miller gave them all a feast; it was the only dope they had ever had without a headache, and most willingly gave the Judge their votes. Pray, let all the candidates profit by Judge Miller's example and success.

The Democrats have no quarrel to make with the rank and file of the Republican party. They want their votes by a fair, square deal. They have a ticket of which they are proud. They are honest, upright, square men--every one of them. They will conduct the offices in a manner that will appeal to every good citizen, who her be Democrat or Republican. They are not party servers. They are not office-holders. They have no masters to serve save the people. They are of the people, for the people; and to all the people they appeal for their support.

Through deep appreciation and gratefulness to The Circle Publishing Company, New York, we clip from the Girls' Department of The Circle magazine for October, the following: "I am giving you the first of the little paragraphs that Miss Babbage will send you every month through this department; she is a girl who is 'doing things' and has learned from experience, and for that reason the little pearls of wisdom she drops for you will be of unusual value.--Editor."

We feel sorry for our good friend, Judge Adair. He hasn't a shadow of a chance to win in the Senatorial race. We have told him so time and again. He is too late getting in. He has missed his opportunity. The race is settled right now. Every county in the district is going Democratic. The Judge don't believe this, but we do, really and truly.

Bill Hall, the Republican candidate for jailer, went to Stephensport last week. He said he couldn't find a man or woman for him there, so he went to Rome, Ind., and found the situation the same way. Mr. Hall laughs and tells the story as though he enjoyed it.

Things never looked brighter for the Democrats than they do now. The enthusiasm is great. Every Democrat is a worker, and is taking a lively interest in one of the best tickets ever put up in the county by any party.

Charlie Miller is home from Eddyville. He says he has been in politics for twenty years, and he never saw things so good for the Democrats. He says the ticket is a sure winner.

KENTUCKY SADDLERS AT HORSE SHOW.

Which Began In Louisville Monday And Will Continue Throughout The Week.

Although liberal prizes have been announced for all the 37 classes of the Louisville Horse, which will be held at the army in that city the week of October 11th., the saddle classes in particular have been well taken care of. The number of classes and the value of the awards is sufficient to insure fine competition among the prominent exhibitors of Kentucky saddle horses, which are of course the finest of the type in the world.

The first class for five-gaited saddlers is for those under 4 years old, and for premiums offered by the American Saddle Horse Breeders' Association. The next is for those not over 15.2, and the class following provides for those exceeding 15.2. The combination class follows, and the championship class is No. 32. The premiums in that class are offered by Paul Jones & Co., of Louisville.

In the three-gaited division the first class is for those 15.2 and under, followed by one of those 15.2 and over 15.3. The next class is for those 15.3 and over, while the ladies' class is next. The American Saddle Horse Breeders' Association offers the prizes in the next class, for three-gaited saddle horses under four years. The combination class follows, and the final event will be the championship class. Entries in these classes have been heavy, and great sport is promised. The attendance from this section of the State will be large.

Many Surprises Are Possible in a Pin "Shower."

Elsie was a great favorite for our little musical club, and when she announced her engagement to the "dearest man in the world" we could scarcely wait to give her a "shower." So a pin-shower was decided upon. We talked over our contributions, as we were anxious to have no duplicates; and what a lot of pins there are to wear!

When Elsie commenced to open her packages her surprise and happiness made our joy complete. One parcel contained a lovely belt-pin, another a hat-pin in a holder, while all kinds of safety-pins on crocheted rings fastened to Dresden ribbons were found in the third. She received a charming stick-pin, collar and veil pins, hairpins of all sorts, and a dainty barrette set with rhinestones. Cubes of fancy toilet-pins, a paper of plain black and white pins in a silk case, and even a pretty watch-pin. And the largest package contained a rolling-pin!--The New Idea Woman's Magazine for November.

that Robert Bain, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., claims to have the oldest drum in this country. I think I can go him one better by at least one hundred years before Burgoyne and his Hessian troops landed on our shores. I now own an old drum which is in a good state of preservation whose early history is lost, but it was, no doubt, brought to America during the early colony days, though at what time it was brought to Kentucky is now unknown. It is supposed to have been during the Revolutionary war. About the year of 1786 Col. Wm. Hardin built a fort known in history as Fort Hardin on the site of the present town of Hardinsburg, Ky. According to tradition this drum was not only beat for the garrison at Fort Hardin, but for all the wars, militia musters, barbecues, public speaking excursions, etc., at Hardinsburg from 1786 to 1895 and it is said here that Maj. Feley, the old tenor drummer, of Hardinsburg, beat this drum on the bloody field of Shiloh. The drum is 17 inch head, 17 inches high, the air opening is where the shell is joined together and is surrounded by a device made with large brass headed tacks and is older than was ever seen here on any drum and looks like the ornaments on the old time half covered trunks which were heirlooms of our oldest living inhabitants. The drumsticks are turned with lead and they look as old as the drum. The drum is now used at all patriotic, political and grand army parades and memorial services.

Smith-Wood Wedding

The marriage of Miss Bettie Lee Smith and Hugh Nelson Wood, at Grace Episcopal church, last night, was witnessed by a large crowd of the friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride had long two loving hearts were pronounced by Rev. Geo. C. Abbott, rector of Grace church. The church was beautifully decorated in white and yellow, which with the richly groomed bride and her attendants and the immediate friends presented a scene seldom if ever exceeded in beauty in any church matrimonial occasion in this city.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. Dixon W. Kitchen, a young woman of rare beauty. She has always been a great favorite in society and by her sweetness of disposition and vivacity of manner endeared herself to all.

The groom is the youngest son of Hon. and Mrs. Hunter Wood, Sr., and is a young man of sterling worth and integrity. For four years he has been the office of the civil engineer of the Louisville, St. Louis and Texas railroad at Louisville, and is now acting as chief engineer of his road between Louisville and Henderson.

After the ceremony the bride couple and attendants were given a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kitchen. After spending a most delightful hour with Mr. and Mrs. Wood went to the L. & N. station and boarded the ten o'clock train for Chicago, the first stopping place on their western tour. After returning from the west Mr. and Mrs. Wood will begin housekeeping in Louisville.

CUTICURA PROVEN PURE
SWEET AND HARMLESS

A New York friend of Cuticura writes the following interesting letter:—
 "My three year old son and heir, after being put to bed on a trip across the Atlantic, investigated the state-room and located a box of graham crackers and a box of Cuticura Ointment.
 "When a search was made for the box, it was found empty and the kid admitted that he had eaten the contents of the entire box spread on the crackers. It cured him of a bad cold and I don't know what else."

No more conclusive evidence than the above could be offered that every ingredient of Cuticura Ointment is absolutely pure, sweet and harmless. If it may be safely eaten by a young child, none but the most beneficial results can be expected to attend its application to even the tenderest skin or youngest infant. This ointment is also used by mothers and nurses to such an extent that Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have for many years been unhesitatingly used throughout the civilized world for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair and hands of infants and children from the hour of birth. And greater still, if possible, is the confidence reposed in Cuticura Remedies for the treatment of torturing and disgusting humors of the skin and scalp. The suffering which they have thus alleviated among the young and the comfort they have afforded worn-out and worried parents have led to their adoption in countless homes as priceless agents in the speedy, permanent, safe and economical treatment of infantile and birth humors, eczemas, rashes, irritations, inflammations and chaps, and other itching, scaly and itchy humors when all other remedies are said to fail.

Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Depot, Louisville, 277, Charleston 894; Paris, 6, Rue de la Paix, Australia, 10, Town & Co., Sydney; Boston, 10, South Ave.; London, 10, Abchurch Lane; New York, 10, Nassau St.; San Francisco, 10, Market St.; Seattle, 10, Third St.; St. Louis, 10, Market St.; Chicago, 10, Market St.; Portland, 10, Market St.; Boston, 10, Market St.; New York, 10, Market St.

5,000 to 50,000 pounds, and the prices ranged from 10 to 1 1/2 cents per pound. The largest crop purchased was 75,000 pounds from Robert Tipton, for which he paid 13 cents per pound. There was a rush of sellers on the market and it is reported to-night that over 1,000 acres changed hands in this city to-day at high prices. The sale of tobacco has made land much higher. Tobacco men are jubilant.

JUDGE CHELF

"NOT DEAD YET."

For The People Of The Ninth Judicial District.

CANNOT CANVASS FIELD.

To the voters of the Ninth Judicial District:

For fear the fact should become lost in the shuffle, I desire to suggest to the voters of the district, that I am now the regular Democratic nominee for the office of Circuit Judge in the District, and have been for sometime. My name will appear upon the official ballot, to be used at the November election under the chicken cock, the Democratic device, and not under the picture of one of my boys. I am told, it is being circulated over the district, that I am not physically able to hold my Courts and attend to the duties of the office, and that my opponent is contending that a more able bodied man should be put in. In fact, I understand that his motto text is, "More able bodied men to the front". I wish to suggest that I am now holding my courts over the District as fast as they come. We are up with the Docket in every County in the District. I am improving in health and strength all the time and I think I soon feel like a two year old. I am not dead yet, and don't intend to die until the time comes, and I strenuously and vociferously object to being administered on before I die. I am fully aware that it is all wrong for a man to get sick, in fact any one who would do a thing like this should be taken out and shot, but nature somehow or other has so arranged things in this world, that we must sometime lay up for repairs. The great steam ship that plows the ocean wave between the two worlds, sometimes becomes lame and unequipped, and must go into the dock for repairs. The iron horse, as he goes belching fire and smoke from the smoke-stack, on his rush from one side of the continent to the other, in time lags, and is run into the round-house to be overhauled and the help tightened. So the rule goes on in its application, both to animate and inanimate creation, and we bow in submission "As these things must needs be."

I am now engaged in holding the October term of the Breckenridge County Circuit Court, and will be so engaged until the November election. I will have no time to canvass the district, and consequently will have to leave my interests in the hands of my friends while I look after the public duties required of me. I have now about served one term in the District as Circuit Judge. I may not have fought a good fight, but as Bryan said: "I know I have kept the faith". My rule has been as far as in me lies, to faithfully and impartially give even-handed justice to all.

If the people of my district think my course as Judge justifies an endorsement upon their part for another term, I will greatly appreciate the same, and will be glad to meet them at the polls where they will find me located in that column of the official ballot presided over by the chicken game cock.

The Green River District Pool Big.

That a big percentage of the tobacco raised in the Green River District this year is in the pool is evinced by the fact that the Green River District Tobacco Association alone has pooled 18,555 acres in three counties. The American Society of Equity claims just about as much, while the Home Warehouse Company has pooled much more than last year.

President Berry, of the Green River Association, has been busy since the pool closed figuring up the total acreage pooled. His figures show that his organization has pooled 4,335 acres in Ohio county, compared to 2,900 last year; 4,150 acres in McLean county, compared to 2,700 last year; and 10,100 acres in Daviess county, compared to 9,600 last year. In Hancock county almost the entire crop is pooled, the Green River Association claiming 55 per cent, and giving the A. S. of E. 45 per cent. Breckenridge county has pooled practically all of its crop. The big increase in Ohio county was made around Fordsville and Narrows, where there was much unpooled tobacco last year.

President Berry states that the crop this year is just about the same as last year. He believes that after the Board of Control meets here next Friday, something will be doing at once in the way of negotiations for a sale. It is the hope of Mr. Berry that the three organizations will not only sell together, but will also receive and handle the crop together.

J. W. Dunn, the Equity leader, states that between 80 and 85 per cent of the crop in the entire district is pooled. He believes that the American Society of Equity has pooled half the crop in Hancock, McLean, Ohio and Daviess combined. A district Equity meeting, with five Kentucky counties and three Indiana counties represented, will be held at Owensboro.

President Emison Shaw, of the Home Warehouse Company, does not yet know what the Home Warehouse pool amounts to. However, he knows that it is far beyond last year's pool, which amounted to 1,000 acres of dark and about 175 acres of burley. The Home Warehouse Company confines itself almost entirely to Daviess county.—Tobacco Tydings.

Restful Combinations. Treat yourself to fill in French linen window and door hangings if your room rejoices in a bouquet wall paper. Reverse the thing in favor of a print of English clints for the hangings showing on to the surface a charming line or even a peacock design should your wall be but a plain tint. The tinted wall is no longer rare in houses that have benefited by the art of the modern decorator, but it is seldom found in the less expensive rented house.

The figured wall is sometimes quite possible even from the decorator's viewpoint. A great part of the work of this genus among men is "making the best of things," and with plain hangings and jellied doors or one rug the worst of wall papers is not always odious.

CHAPTER V.

WILLIAM broad minded Mrs. Brooks observed to her husband that she did not understand her mother any more than her mother understood her. She had expressed exactly the mental relation in which they stood toward each other. Mrs. Harris was one of those women occasionally to be met with who continue to treat their grown-up sons, and especially their grown-up daughters, as children and feel it incumbent upon them—any consider it their bounden duty—to interfere with advice and comment in the natural progress of domestic sophistication of their young wedded offspring. Moreover, she was a woman wholly lacking in tact and depth of mind and possessed to an exaggerated degree that "quickness of reason," vanity.

Mrs. Harris and Miss Beth Harris were out for a ride with Captain Williams, who accompanied them, and all were in automobile tenses. Her mother and sister greeted Emma effusively. Their escort extended his hand, but Mrs. Brooks was too much occupied for once in responding to her mother's embraces to notice it. The staid in with rude familiarity without removing his automobile cap, upon which he had pushed up his goggles and found himself face to face with Smith.

"Hello! You here?" he said by way of greeting, greatly surprised to see his superintendent there on that above all night.

"Yes," replied Jiminy. "I'm here again."

"I thought to take a berth here," grunted his employer, looking round for the most comfortable chair and installing himself in it. "You're always around."

"Much as possible," admitted Smith tranquilly, remaining standing. "How do you find your new car?"

"Good enough. Cost $5,000—ought to be good enough to be."

Mrs. Harris and Beth bustled in, throwing open their automobile coats and disclosing very handsome gowns that contrasted strangely with Emma's poor little cotton frock.

"Why, good evening, Jiminy?" cried Mrs. Harris. "Where's Joe?"

"Gone out for a walk, I guess," he answered. "How's he?"

"Very well, thank you, Mr. Smith," responded that young person, looking at her frigidly.

"Mr. Smith?" he echoed, looking at her curiously.

The girl raised her eyebrows and affected surprise.

"Isn't that right?" she inquired.

"Yes—Smith is the name," he replied. "It ain't that I've forgot it—no—it only to remind you that the first one—Jiminy—ain't been changed."

"No, dearie, Jiminy wouldn't know what it meant to be mistreated," observed Mrs. Harris with an intonation of disdain.

"No mother," put in Williams, "but a man's got to get used to it."

"Have you got used to it, captain?" asked Emma.

"Yes and no. I never had it given to me until I came east—always used to be Cap'n Bill or something on that order—but with eastern airs and a bit of prosperity your old ways have got to change."

Mrs. Harris had been gazing about her deprecatingly. She wanted to know why they should stay in the dining room. Emma explained that they had succeeded in inducing the janitor to have the sitting room papered and that it was all upset.

"This ain't bad," commented Captain Williams. "It's real cozy, and you can see a woman's hand in the arrangement."

"But it's a little bit of a stuffy four roomed flat," objected Beth, turning up her pretty nose. "Really, I should die in one."

"Well, Beth," remarked Smith, with his quiet drawl, "you never can tell. Maybe you will."

Beth made a grimace.

"I would, if I had to do my own work, washing dishes—ugh!"

"I don't see how Emma stands it," declared Mrs. Harris. "It's just disgusting."

"Well, mother, please remember it, Emma who does stand it, after all," retorted that little woman patiently. "So please, please, don't you mind."

"I think it's a great little nook, Mrs. Brooks," opined Williams.

"Thank you, captain," she said gratefully.

"And fixed up nice and comfortable. Can't say as anything looks cheap."

"Thank you again. Perhaps it isn't."

"You know, captain, you ain't the only one who's found out the secret of making a dollar produce 500 cents," said Smith, with his whimsical smile.

"Has he done that?" inquired Mrs. Harris, affecting surprise and admiration.

"Figuratively speaking, I presume?" chimed in Beth primly.

"I always thought 500 was figuratively speaking," said Smith.

Captain Williams had propped his pipe, filled it and lighted it without asking permission.

"Smith says I'm close. I'm not!" he declared. "To me business is business. If I've got money nobody gets it to me. I earned what I earned, and then I made that earn more."

"You sure ain't given it no vacation," retorted his superintendent dryly.

"And that's right," affirmed Mrs. Harris with some heat. "I believe in money getting money. Mr. Harris was one of those soft hearted men who never made the best of his opportunities—always trying to be fair and square with other men, and what thanks did he get?"

"Mother, please!" remonstrated Emma.

"It's true," went on her parent. "If he hadn't been that way, Emma, do you suppose you'd be here doing your own work?"

"Mother, I insist you must not!"—

"Mother is perfectly right," interrupted Beth. "Emma, you don't deserve this kind of a life."

"But have I complained?" demanded Mrs. Brooks desperately. "Why do you say such things?"

"Because I've got myself to thank for," snarled her mother. "You're wasting yourself—tied up to the hilt all the time—and everybody—all my friends know just how you're fixed. You're never invited anywhere any more."

"Completely forgotten," said Beth.

Brooks, who had let himself in silently and unobserved, stood in the hall irresolutely, watching them and listening to the conversation.

"Please don't!" entreated Emma, greatly distressed. "It's my affair, and besides, before people!"

"You might say the captain's almost one of the family since your father put in his mother. I know you should never have married Joe, but he couldn't take care of you the way he ought."

Williams gazed at the sweet, frail woman standing impudently before him, and as he gazed his muscles gradually relaxed, the wrath faded from his eyes, and finally the corners of his mouth twitched in a faint smile.

"All right, Mrs. Brooks," he said gently. "I almost forgot where I was. I apologize."

Smith, his hands in his pockets, moved away across the room.

"Joe, you know it's your home—our home," expostulated his wife.

"I—I forgot. Excuse me," he muttered sulkily, looking ashamed.

Smith spoke up, his winning smile lighting his face.

"You know, it's been an all fired hot day—just the kind of weather when about every mother's son is on edge. Now, Joe, he slipped a cog, and that sort of put the whole confounded machine out of gear, including the captain. But now you see, it's just all forgotten."

"Possibly. As far as I'm concerned I must be going," declared Mrs. Harris coldly.

"Indeed, yes!" chirped Beth.

Brooks now, his rage having spent itself and his bravado flaked out, was almost crying.

"But the words choked in his throat, and, picking up his hat, he hastened out of the room and the flat."

"Will you please take us away, captain?" requested Mrs. Harris.

"Just a moment," he said. "Mrs. Brooks, I'm awfully sorry about what happened just now."

"I—I'd rather you wouldn't speak of it," she told him.

"Perhaps I have been a little hard," he said earnestly, and apologized to her husband and grasped his arm.

"Oh, Joe, don't!" she implored. "You don't!"

He hung her roughly from him.

"Let me alone!" he shouted and turned to Williams again, quivering with rage. "Do you know why she hasn't?" he continued. "Well, I'll tell you all it's because this man ain't on the square. He began by cheating and murdering rogues who worked for him aboard his rotten trading ships. Then, after he got through with the belaying pin, after he got his money, he picked up the salary list for a club, and he's murdered and wounded and maimed with that. You see my wife here? She's only one of hundreds, and she suffers. It is too bad that she married me. It is too bad that she's got to do her own work. It is too bad that she's got to wash and scrub and sweat in the heat, but that man's to blame. If you gave me a fair share of what I produce, if you didn't grind down, oppress and robbery of others. That's the kind of a man you are, and you might as well know it."

Captain Williams had listened to this denunciation at first in utter amazement. Then his shaggy eyebrows had knitted together, and his little eyes had narrowed to slits, while the blood had spread over his face in a deep

"Hello! You here?"

"It's too late now," said Beth, shrugging her shoulders. "Captain, don't you think Emma should have more?"

"Well, Mrs. Brooks must know her own money," he replied. "Your father when he worked for me always had a way of his own. But it does seem as if she should at least have a hired girl and more than four rooms to a flat, but—"

Brooks strode into the room, livid with passion, goaded to a white heat of fury, reaching for everything, murder in his heart, and, hurling his hat to the door, faced the company.

"It does seem so, does it?" he fairly blazed, going over to his employer.

"I'm glad you think so. And why hasn't he? Will you tell me that? Speak! Will you tell me that? I'll tell you why, my slave driver!"

Mrs. Harris and Beth sat speechless and pale, but Smith rose.

"Steady, Joe, boy!" he admonished. "Emma had hurried to her husband and grasped his arm."

"Oh, Joe, don't!" she implored. "You don't!"

He hung her roughly from him.

"Let me alone!" he shouted and turned to Williams again, quivering with rage. "Do you know why she hasn't?" he continued. "Well, I'll tell you all it's because this man ain't on the square. He began by cheating and murdering rogues who worked for him aboard his rotten trading ships. "There ain't no one ever said them things to me and got away with it," he thundered, clenching his fists and gathering all his tremendous strength as he rose to crush his accuser.

Mrs. Harris and Beth sprang up in great alarm, and at the captain's terrifying voice and his ferocious aspect Brooks charged back, Smith stood impassive, but watching Williams, toward whom he had been edging.

Emma had stepped quickly between the captain and her husband.

"Please—please, captain—for my sake," she pleaded.

"I don't care—let him come on," cried Brooks doggedly, but his voice faltering.

"I—I forgot. Excuse me," he muttered sulkily, looking ashamed.

Smith spoke up, his winning smile lighting his face.

"You know, it's been an all fired hot day—just the kind of weather when about every mother's son is on edge. Now, Joe, he slipped a cog, and that sort of put the whole confounded machine out of gear, including the captain. But now you see, it's just all forgotten."

"Possibly. As far as I'm concerned I must be going," declared Mrs. Harris coldly.

"Indeed, yes!" chirped Beth.

Brooks now, his rage having spent itself and his bravado flaked out, was almost crying.

"But the words choked in his throat, and, picking up his hat, he hastened out of the room and the flat."

"Will you please take us away, captain?" requested Mrs. Harris.

"Just a moment," he said. "Mrs. Brooks, I'm awfully sorry about what happened just now."

"I—I'd rather you wouldn't speak of it," she told him.

"Perhaps I have been a little hard," he said earnestly, and apologized to her husband and grasped his arm.

"Oh, Joe, don't!" she implored. "You don't!"

He hung her roughly from him.

"Let me alone!" he shouted and turned to Williams again, quivering with rage. "Do you know why she hasn't?" he continued. "Well, I'll tell you all it's because this man ain't on the square. He began by cheating and murdering rogues who worked for him aboard his rotten trading ships. Then, after he got through with the belaying pin, after he got his money, he picked up the salary list for a club, and he's murdered and wounded and maimed with that. You see my wife here? She's only one of hundreds, and she suffers. It is too bad that she married me. It is too bad that she's got to do her own work. It is too bad that she's got to wash and scrub and sweat in the heat, but that man's to blame. If you gave me a fair share of what I produce, if you didn't grind down, oppress and robbery of others. That's the kind of a man you are, and you might as well know it."

Captain Williams had listened to this denunciation at first in utter amazement. Then his shaggy eyebrows had knitted together, and his little eyes had narrowed to slits, while the blood had spread over his face in a deep

"Please—please, captain—for my sake," she pleaded.

"I've lived a hard life with hard people. Since the day I shined before the mast in a north Pacific sealer I leaped and a cuff and a blow was what rotten grub, the scurry and all them things meant, and I knew that the only thing between them things and comfort, decency and the respect of folks was money. I started to get money, and maybe I have been a little hard—just a little hard."

"No one would call you easy, captain," agreed Smith.

"Anyway, Mrs. Brooks," continued Williams, "Joe keeps his job, and it ain't going to make a bit of difference between us."

"Not the least?" she asked, with a winning smile.

"Certainly not," said Mrs. Harris. "Joe," declared Beth languidly, "was absent. He quite bores me."

Smith smiled at her and injected a good deal of irony into his tone as he said:

"Yes, you looked as if something was wrong, Beth."

The captain approached Mrs. Brooks with an attempt at gallantry that was elephantine and grotesque and related her situation, which she suffered to remain limply in his clasp.

"Well, Mrs. Brooks," he said, "if it's all squared up you will be riding with us, won't you?"

"Not tonight. You will excuse me," she replied.

"Certainly," he assured her, warily shaking hands, though his hand were a pump handle. "Good night."

"Good night," she answered.

Then she advanced to receive the parting kisses of her mother and sister, which were a good deal less cordial than those with which they had greeted her on their arrival. Their osculatory reserves seemed to have been kept in cold storage during the interval.

The fact that in the engrossing ceremony of kissing her mother and sister, everybody forgot to be polite enough to say good night to Smith did not ruffle his equanimity in the least.

CHAPTER VI.

WHEN the door had closed behind the visitors Mrs. Brooks and Smith sat down and gazed at each other in silence for some minutes.

"Well?" exclaimed Emma, interrogatively, at last.

"Well," he replied, "between you and me, Joe came as near getting skinned alive as any I ever saw."

"It was terrible!"

"It was terribly true. You saved him."

"I know."

"The captain must like you. I never did think he could like anybody."

"I hate him!" she replied, with a grimace of disgust. "Ugh, what a beast!"

Smith reflected.

"Maybe, and maybe not," he mused. "I can't just make him out."

At this juncture the front door opened and Brooks entered.

"I saw them drive off," he said, dropping into a chair. "I hope they will stay away in future. That mother and sister of yours make me tired! I want stand for them and what's more I won't. They'd drive a saint to drink, and I'm no saint and don't purpose to be, either."

The wife turned to him with a faint smile.

"For the general run of the evening, I think they were short shrifted. You were talking to them for an hour, and they were gone."

"Very well, it's done," she said, and angry at her own turn, rose and went to her room.

Indifferently he watched her go, then turned to Smith.

"Got anything to smoke, Jiminy?" he inquired.

"No," he replied, fumbling in his pockets, "as usual, I'm just out, but I'll run around to the corner store and get some more."

Left alone, Brooks began to give way to the uneasiness and apprehension that had followed upon his scene with Captain Williams.

"I wonder if Williams will fire me," he muttered. "If he doesn't it's on account of Emma. He acted as if he'd go a long way for her."

He was anxious to know what had happened after his brusque departure. He went into the bedroom and found his wife in tears.

"Don't cry, Emma," he said soothingly, going to her and taking her in his arms. "I didn't mean to hurt your feelings. I know I've got a fierce growl on my mind, but I can't help it. So would you have one if you'd had to put up with what I have today?"

Mrs. Brooks was one of those sweet natured women who could not sulk for more than five minutes if they tried. It needed but his caress and apparent contrition to dispel her resentment.

"You certainly have had cause to worry, dear," she assented.

"After what's happened tonight I'll have to hunt another job," he said. "But I don't care. I'm glad I told the beast what I thought of him. Some day somebody'll tell him what they think of him and plug him, too, as sure as he's a man."

"You'll not have to hunt for another job yet awhile," she told him. "The captain said he would overlook it and that it wouldn't make any difference."

Her husband looked at her in astonishment, half incredulous.

"He said that?"

"Yes, and I'm glad it turned out as it has, for here we'd manage if you were out of work just now goodness knows, I don't!"

"Just how did he put it?"

"He said he was awfully sorry for what had occurred, that he knew he had been hard at times and that as far as your place and we were concerned there was to be no change."

Brooks' relief showed in his face.

THE TOBACCO POOL AN IMMENSE ONE

Green River Association Pools 18,500 Acres, A. S. of E. Claiming as Much and Home Warehouse Company Beats Last Year.

BIG VICTORY FOR EQUITY

That a big percentage of the tobacco raised in the Green river district this year is in the pool is evidenced by the fact that the Green River District Tobacco association alone has pooled 18,585 acres in three counties. The American Society of Equity claims just about as much the Home warehouse company has pooled much more than last year.

President Berry, of the Green River association, has been busy since the pool closed figuring up the total acreage pooled. His figures show that his organization has pooled 4,335 acres in Ohio county, compared to 2,000 last year, 4,190 acres in McLean county, compared to 3,700 last year, and 10,100 in Daviess county, compared to 9,600 last year. In Hancock county almost the entire crop is pooled, the Green River association claiming 60 per cent and giving the A. S. of E. 40 per cent. In Breckinridge county has pooled practically all of its crop. The big increase in Ohio county was made around Fordsville and Narrows, where there was much unpooled tobacco last year.

President Berry states that the crop this year is just about the same size as last year. It is the hope of Mr. Berry that the three organizations will not only sell together but will also receive and handle the crop together.

J. W. Dunn, the Equity leader states that between 80 and 85 per cent of the crop in the entire district is pooled. He believes that the American Society of Equity has pooled half the crop in Hancock, McLean, Ohio and Daviess combined.

President Emison Shaw, of the Home Warehouse company, does not yet know what the Home Warehouse pool amounts to. However, he knows that it is far beyond last year's pool, which, amounted to 1,600 acres of Pryor and about 175 acres of Burley. The Home

Warehouse company confines itself almost entirely to Daviess county.

Big Victory.

Whitesville, Oct. 2.—To the Growers: Now the battle has ended and the smoke cleared away, so we can see the results of our fight for the tobacco growers, we feel like shouting victory. Surely the good Lord has been with us in our efforts for justice and fair prices. The pooling pledges are now closed and will not be circulated any more this year. Some want to know what you will do with the man on the outside. I say leave him to his conscience, the buyer and his God. We know he can not do any better on the outside. He is at the mercy of the buyer. He must sell to them or keep it. If they show him mercy and give him a fair price, let us not abuse him. We are getting all we ask. What more do we want? This year hundreds have signed that never did before. Next year all will sign. I wish to compliment the Green River association and Home Warehouse for good work done in pooling and in cooperation with the A. S. of E. It seems even with three associations in the field we can keep pace, if we try. With all three standing like a rock wall and the tobacco in the pool, success is certain. Now, a few words for Equity. We have pooled ten times more tobacco in Daviess county than we pooled last year. So we feel that the A. S. of E. is here to stay. With the victory gained in the Burley district we feel safe in that district. With over half of the pooled tobacco in Kentucky and Tennessee in the Equity society, and all in Indiana, Ohio and Wisconsin in the A. S. of E. it seems only a matter of time until all will be in Equity. Then let us take heart, go to work as never before and boom the cause that has saved the tobacco grower, wheat growers, wool growers and all farmers everywhere.

L. & N. MAKES FINE SHOWING THIS YEAR.

Operating Expenses Have Been Reduced—Old Directors Are Re-elected—L. W. Botts Succeeds the Late Attila Cox.

NET INCOME $7,721,388.32.

(From The Evening Post)

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Louisville & Nashville railroad was held at the offices here, and the annual report of the directors on the operations for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1909, was received.

All of the old directors were re-elected, and L. W. Botts, treasurer of the Henderson Route, and president of the Columbia Trust Company, was chosen to succeed the late Attila Cox on the directorate. The board of directors is now made up of the following: August Belmont, John I. Waterbury, Warren Delano, D. P. Kingsley, Edward W. Sheldon and W. G. Oakman, New York; H. Walter and Michael Jenkins, Baltimore; L. W. Botts and Milton H. Smith, Louisville; G. M. Lane, Boston; W. G. Raoul, Atlanta, and Alexander Hamilton, Petersburg, Va.

The directors will meet within ten days to elect officers for the ensuing year, but no call has been issued for the meeting as yet.

The representation of stock exceeded that of any previous meeting of stockholders, 444,588 shares being represented out of a total of 600,000.

The annual report set forth the mileage. This was as follows:

Lines operated and operated.	4,308
Lines operated under separate organizations.	2,324
Lines owned by L. & N., but operated by other companies.	209,540
Total mileage.	7,002

General Results.

The general results are here summarized:

Operating revenues—$46,425,801.45

Less operating expenses 29,627,409.49

Net operating revenues—$16,798,391.97

Taxes—1,457,901.00

Goodwill—414,360.00

Other income—$1,310,569.78

Total income—$18,677,462.75

Deductions from income—1,946,177.00

South & North Alabama R. R. surplus (included in above)—$1,402.20

Net income carried to profit and loss account—$7,721,388.32

The balance to credit of profit and loss account amounts to $23,431,327.08.

The report says: "The net income amounted to $7,721,388.32, an increase of $4,896,931.90 over the previous year, due to increase in operating revenues and reduction in operating expenses. All salaries of $3,000 and over per annum, which were reduced in 1909, were restored to amounts previously in effect.

Louisville & Atlantic Railroad.

"In June, 1909, the company bought the entire capital stock and all the bonds of the Louisville & Atlantic Railroad Company. The line of road extends from Versailles, Ky., through Nicholasville, Richmond, Irvine and Beattyville, to Beattyville Junction, a distance of 101.1 miles. Also a branch line about three miles long south of the Kentucky river to Idamay, Ky., together with a bridge over the river at Heidelberg; the branch line and the bridge being formerly the property of the Kentucky Coal Development Company. Control of the property was taken by this company on July 1, 1909, but the road will be operated for the present under the organization of the Louisville & Atlantic Railroad Company.

On January 28, 1909, this company, pursuant to the provisions of trust deed, called for redemption and payment on April 1, 1909, the whole series of Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company five-twenty four per cent. collateral trust bonds outstanding, viz. $23,000,000.

The securities deposited as collateral for these bonds were sold at an average price of ninety-nine and accrued interest, netting this company $29,565,360, which provided for the redemption of the five-twenty collateral trust bonds, and the payment of the $5,000,000 three-year five per cent. gold notes, due March 1, 1910.

As of June 30, 1909, $21,917,000 of the collateral trust bonds have been redeemed and $1,700,000 of the three-year notes purchased and canceled.

With deep regret the board reports the death of Mr. Attila Cox, a director of the company since October 2, 1896.

The board acknowledges the fidelity and efficiency with which the officers and employees of the company have served its interests.

H. Walters, Chairman.
M. H. Smith, President.

"I am now able to do my house work again, and have a good appetite. I have used thirteen bottles of Peruna and one of Manilla. My husband and children are also in good health. We always keep Peruna in the house. I thank you a thousand times for your advice."—Mrs. Alvina Plamann, 1914 Walnut St., Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

If any one really wanted to find out whether or not Peruna is good for the baby who would be naturally ask? Some one who never used Peruna? Some one who is prejudiced against Peruna? Some one actuated by selfish motives who is opposing Peruna for the sake of the notoriety?

Would any sane person who really wanted to know about Peruna ask an of these people? Of course not.

Who would they ask? They would ask mothers who have raised babies and used Peruna for their babies times without number. They would ask the parents who love their families, and know more about Peruna than all the professions writers in the world.

Above we give the portrait and testimonial of one of the mothers who has used Peruna, and who has raised healthy and happy babies. We have many more such mothers in every state in the Union. These mothers give their testimonials entirely unsolicited, without pay or expectation of pay. Their only desire is to point out to other mothers a useful and reliable family medicine.
